ISTANBUL, June 3, 2012 /PRNewswire/ -- ManpowerGroup (NYSE: MAN), the world leader in innovative workforce solutions and World Economic Forum (WEF) strategic partner, will lead sessions held at the WEF on the Middle East, North Africa and Eurasia 2012 in Istanbul this week for the purpose of improving the talent pipeline in these overlapping regions.

"In Europe, unemployment has reached its highest rate in 13 years — now over the 17 million mark -- and young people represent the majority of the unemployed," said Francoise Gri, ManpowerGroup President of Southern Europe. "Despite high unemployment and a pool of available candidates, we face an impending talent crisis in this mega-region. Companies are struggling to find people with the skills they need as their existing workforces age and retire and the jobless youth crisis escalates. Tomorrow's workforce is sitting on the bench, not proactively building out the skills needed to launch and sustain a career."

One in four employers in the Europe, Middle East & Africa (EMEA) region report that they are struggling to find candidates, according to the 2012 ManpowerGroup Talent Shortage Survey results. The most common reason EMEA employers give is a lack of technical skills and competencies. Leveraging ManpowerGroup's unrivalled global reach and in-depth understanding of the macro and micro trends in the world of work, ManpowerGroup executives will lead CEOs, business leaders and policymakers in identifying the solutions that conquer the talent shortage.

"In the long-term, companies, governments and educators must work together to build a sustainable pipeline of domestic talent through the right training and development programs, particularly for young people," said David Arkless, ManpowerGroup President of Corporate and Government Affairs. "In real time, companies and governments must explore the opportunities provided by strategic migration, bringing in workers with relevant skills from outside national or even regional borders."

ManpowerGroup executives participating in this week's regional WEF include: Arkless; Gri; Dalia Narkis, Managing Director of ManpowerGroup Israel and East Mediterranean Countries; and Simon Matthews, Country Manager of ManpowerGroup Thailand and Middle East.

Monday 4th June:

ManpowerGroup will release "How to Advance The Capabilities of Today's Workforce" which advises companies, individuals, governments and educators on the thinking and solutions, including innovative training, which is required to bolster the employability of individuals.

Tuesday 5th June:

ManpowerGroup will host a Human Age breakfast briefing to explore challenges facing companies in today's era of complex and transformative change. ManpowerGroup began advocating almost two years ago that access to talent had replaced capital as the competitive differentiator in the Human Age, a concept later echoed across the business world and thought leadership circles, including WEF meetings held around the world.

Arkless will lead a discussion entitled the "Youth Employment Crisis — Time for Action," moderated by Nik Gowing of BBC World News.

Wednesday 6th June:

Arkless will lead "Harnessing Talent Mobility for Growth," which will examine mobilizing talent across regions by overcoming xenophobia, immigration barriers and brain drain paranoia.
